

National Fish and Wildlife Foundation

$2.54 Billion

Committed for restoration

The National Fish & Wildlife Foundation (or “NFWF”) is a nonprofit organization that funds conservation projects across the United States. As part of the criminal settlements the federal government reached with BP and Transocean (two companies involved in the oil spill), NFWF received money for projects that benefit natural resources harmed by the oil spill.

How much money is left?

NFWF received more than $2.5 billion over a five-year period (from 2013-2018). So far, about $1.27 billion has been awarded to projects. That means about $1.27 billion is left.

What kind of projects?

In Louisiana...

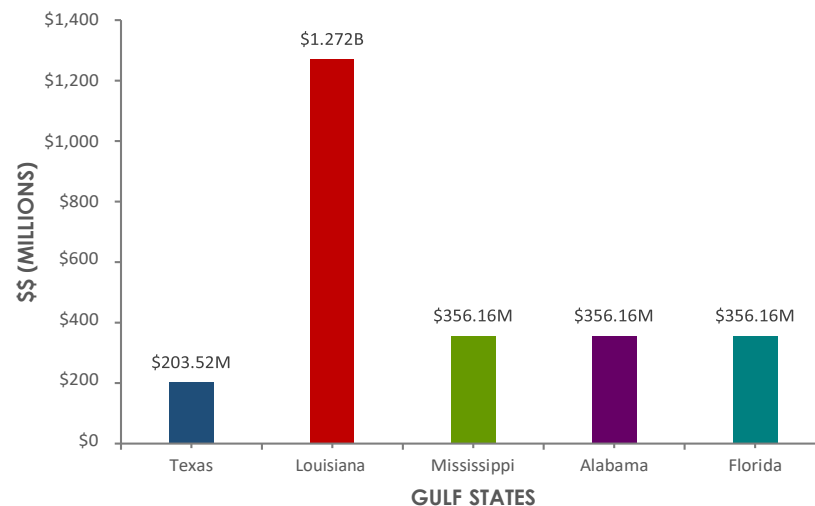

Barrier islands and river diversions

In the other Gulf States...

Natural resource projects

Where Money Will Go

Who pays?

The money is coming from BP and Transocean.

Who is in charge?

NFWF decides how the money is spent, but must consult with federal and Gulf state agencies. It must also follow rules set out in the criminal settlements.

Need More Information?